North says he just followed orders

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Oliver North firmly defended his Iran-Contra role Thursday from the witness stand at his criminal trial, declaring he was merely a Marine following White House orders. "I was not stepping in, I was brought in," he said.

North was stopped before he could respond to his lawyer's suggestion that then-President Reagan had designated him for the role. Asked directly who told him to secretly help Nicaraguan rebels, North named former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane, McFarlane's then-deputy John Poindexter and the late CIA Director William Casey.

North's testimony came shortly after his lawyers read the jury a lengthy statement — agreed to by prosecutors — that said George Bush had played a role as intermediary in Reagan's secret effort to aid the Nicaraguan rebels after Congress banned official U.S. help.

As rapid-fire developments replaced the sometimes-languid pace of the trial, now in its seventh week, the jury heard that Bush personally told the president of Honduras in 1985 that extra aid was being funneled to his country. In earlier testimony, McFarlane had said that the aid was part of a secret agreement calling for Honduras to help the Contras.

At the White House, press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said, "We can't say anything. It would become a part of the case."

North, who faces 12 felony charges including lying or misleading Congress and then-Attorney General Edwin Meese III about his efforts to help the Contras, testified that he had been ordered by his superiors to keep silent about his role in keeping the rebels going after the cutoff of official aid.

"I was told not to tell anybody," North said. "I was particularly admonished" to keep secret "that another country was providing millions of dollars to help the Contras."

That was an apparent reference to Saudi Arabia, which supplied some $32 million in aid to the Contras, beginning in mid-1984.

North described himself as an orders-obeying Marine who had planned to return to Camp Lejeune to command a battalion when top officials in the Reagan administration enlisted him to run the secret Contra operation in 1984.

"Was there a time when you were stepping in" to help the Contras? asked North lawyer Brendan Sullivan.

"I was not stepping in; I was brought in," North replied.

Sullivan asked whether North understood that Reagan had designated him as the Contras' new provider. Prosecutor John Kecker objected; U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell sustained the objection and North didn't answer.

On point after point, North said he had permission of superiors. For Project Democracy, as the help to the Contras was known, he said he had the approval of McFarlane, Poindexter and Casey. The orders to keep secret the contributions from other countries came from the president, Casey and McFarlane, he said.

$5 million requested for fusion research

By TODD JAMES WILLARDSON

Gov. Norm Bangerter called the state Legislature to meet today in a special session with the Board of Regents and University of Utah leaders to discuss his request for $5 million for the University of Utah's room temperature fusion project.

Bangerter said the Board of Regents recommended additional funding be made available so that the engineering development and possible commercialization of this project would be fully supported.

"We're sending a message to all the world and the message says that Utah can compete in the big leagues," said Governor's Office Press Secretary Francine Giani. The funding, however, will be placed in an account and will not be made available nor spent until after the project has been confirmed as successful, he said.

"It's an attempt by the Governor to keep the research from leaving Utah," said University of Utah spokesperson Jo Anne McNulty. University of Utah Professor Stanley Pons has had several offers from individuals and corporations who are willing to fund the project providing they receive the patents, she said.

There have also been offers from every European country and some South American countries, with Italy and Canada showing the most interest, said McNulty.

The funding will provide equipment and other necessities for Pons to continue his project, said University of Utah Public Relations spokesperson Barb Shelly. "The offers have been so great and so time consuming that Professor Pons has stepped down from his position as Chairman of the Chemistry Department," she said.

"Because the fund will come from tax dollars, BYU will not receive any money as it is a private university," said Shelly.

"Tax payers may not be too excited when the proposal is passed as we expect it, but it has the potential to override the outlay in jobs and future developments the project may bring to Utah, and several legislators have gone public with their support of its pursuit and funding," said Shelly.

BYU Piezonuclear Fusion Expert and Assistant Professor of Physics Steve Jones said his project has been adequately funded by the Department of Energy and, therefore, has no need for Utah tax funding through the Governor's proposal, said BYU Assistant Director of Public Communications Brent Harker.

Jones has been much more understated about his discoveries, which were featured Wednesday in the Wall Street Journal, said BYU Director of Public Communications Paul Richards. He said there is no question that BYU has produced nuclear fusion at room temperature, but the

Complaints over US West earnings heard

By KENNETH S. ROGERSON
Senior Reporter

Hearings will begin April 20 stemming from complaints that US West Communications, Inc. has been exceeding the earning limit set by the Utah Public Service Commission.

According to Stephen Hewlett, a secretary for PSC where the hearings will be held, the purpose of the hearings is to decide whether or not US West really has been over earning and, if so, how much money needs to be returned to the consumers.

"US West did admit they were over earning," said Hewlett. "But they felt that no money should be returned till the hearing was held."

According to Hewlett, after the PSC was asked to look into the earnings of US West, an interim decrease of $26 million in rates was placed on the company beginning September 1988 until a rate case could be held.

"It has taken this long to get the rate case together but we felt the interim decrease was appropriate," said Hewlett. Now, there are enough testimonies to start the hearings and the PSC will decide if the decrease was justified.

Steve Linton, public relations representative for US West Communications in Provo, said, "We won't apologize for our efficiency. We are heading toward a competitive future and, therefore, we want to improve our efficiency."

According to Linton, US West should be allowed to keep the money they earn because they are proving to use that money in efficient ways. "There should be some method to reward our efficiency, we don't want to be penalized," he said.

The Division of Public Utilities and the Commission of Consumer Services are presenting claims against US West of $20 million and up to $40 million, respectively, in over earnings.

Phil Bullock, telecommunications economist for the Commission of Consumer Services, said, "We monitor US West on an ongoing basis."

In the upcoming hearings, Bullock said there will be a decrease in rates because every party involved, except US West of course, supports the decrease.

"Each party will put their proposed adjustments on the table and the PSC will decide," he said.

The hearings are scheduled to last 4 1/2 weeks and, according to Linton, whatever happens, "we intend to continue to improve our efficiency" in order to compete in the market.

According to Hewlett, the restitution could come in the form of consumer rate decreases, but Bullock said in the hearings, the PSC will decide which consumers the decrease will be for.

Ueberroth agrees to buy Eastern

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A group led by former baseball commissioner Peter V. Ueberroth agreed Thursday to buy strike-crippled Eastern Airlines, and a union spokesman said he was cautiously optimistic the deal could end the month-old walkout.

The $464 million agreement would give employees a 30 percent share in the company in exchange for wage concessions. The sale by Eastern's parent, Texas Air Corp., is subject to approval by U.S. Bankruptcy Court and Eastern's creditors. Eastern also must reach new work agreements with its striking unions by Monday, under terms of the sale.

"Under this agreement, Eastern can be back flying in very short order," said Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo, who has been the target of bitter personal attacks from union members. About 500 striking Machinists jammed a union hall in Miami, where Eastern is based, cheering and chanting, "Take me out to the ball game!" and "Hey, hey! Ho, ho! Lorenzo's got to go!" after hearing of the sale.

Eastern has been virtually paralyzed since March 4 by the Machinists' strike, which has drawn the support of pilots and flight attendants. Eastern filed March 9 for protection from creditors in bankruptcy court as its cash dried up.

"It's a mammoth challenge," said Ueberroth. "I'm convinced that there is a spirit amongst the people in the company that I can help bring together to help this airline."

The sale includes Eastern's profitable Northeast shuttle, but Ueberroth will follow through on an earlier agreement to sell the service to developer Donald Trump for $365 million.

Ueberroth, who stepped down as baseball commissioner Saturday, was vice president of Trans International Airlines for two years and founded a travel agency in Southern California in 1963.

First Travel Corp. eventually grew into the second-largest agency in North America.

He was organizer of the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, which turned a profit of $230 million and put him on the cover of Time magazine as Man of the Year.

As baseball commissioner, he turned the game from a $67 million-a-year money-loser to one that made $100 million last year.

Frank Ortis, vice president of Machinists Local 702 and Miami strike coordinator, said it was impossible to tell whether unions would fare better "until we get into dealings with Commissioner Ueberroth."

European nations to unify markets but not meld cultures

Editor's note: This is the second article of two articles about the plan to create a unified European market in 1992.

By GERTRUD STIEFLER
Senior Reporter

A United States of Europe.

Some saw the birth of such a concept when the European Court of Justice some years ago overruled a German complaint against the marketing of French light beer in West Germany. "If it's good enough for the French, it's good enough for the Germans," was the Court's conclusion.

The idea of a union of the 12 nations, with nine languages and often widely different cultures and deep historical differences, has people raising an eyebrow, if not both.

"I think it is quite clear to the people now that these regional and local differences are there and that's a part of the rich diversity of Europe, which culturally is very important," said Jose Beneyto, civil servant for the European Parliament from Madrid, Spain.

The challenge then is to unify, but not "uniformize," he said. "Culturally, I think, the differences of internal conflict are no longer there. People are traveling a lot; languages are taught everywhere; the mentality is changing." French is the official language of the community, but there is a very strong push towards making English the common language.

"The difficulties are within the national governments," said Beneyto. He said the harmonization of sales tax was difficult with such taxes ranging from 15 percent in France to none in Luxembourg. The British would prefer capital liberalization without harmonization of taxes.

Washington correspondent for the British news weekly "The Economist," John Peet, said the British government is worried Thatcher's process of reducing government control in London would be substituted by more intervention from Brussels.

President of the European Commission, Jacques Delors, recently said he predicted that in ten years, three-fourths of all legislation in the 12 EC countries would originate with the European Community.

Reforms in the past 10 years has speeded up the decision making process within the community. Now direct elections are held to select the European Parliament members, while before they were appointed. Earlier, a single country's veto could stop a decision by the Council, now decisions are made by majority vote.

To add authority to the community, the European Council, made up of the heads of state of the member countries, meet two or three times a year.

Peet said while the British government will stay out of the European monetary system, the objections to the 1992 plan were not strong enough to compel the country to leave the Community all together.

Six nations, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Lichtenstein, Finland and Iceland, make up a loose trading union called the European Free Trade Association (EFTA). In 1988

US exports to the EFTA countries was 9 billion or 11 percent of exports to the EC, with Switzerland and Sweden as the biggest trading partners.

With 1992 around the corner, the members of EFTA worry about what has been called "the fortress of Europe."

"There is a fear among the EFTA countries that they are going to be left out of the New Europe," said Rene Schwok, a research assistant for EFTA from Geneva, Switzerland, currently on leave at Harvard University. "With liberalized procurement within the community, they are afraid all the benefits will go to the EC countries and not for the EFTA countries."

The pressure has caused the EFTA countries to look for ways to strengthen the organization. Some countries, like Norway and Austria, have gone so far as to consider membership in the EC. "They are saying that if we have to give up part of our national sovereignty (to a stronger EFTA), why not give it directly to the EC?" said Schwok.

So far only a small part of the 235 directives for 1992, set down in the European Commission's White Paper in 1985, have actually been implemented.

Beneyto said that the 1992 time frame might be tight, but that there was every indication that the plan for a single European market would become reality. And with pressures growing, in the end, perhaps no European government will be strong enough to go it alone.

Wisdom and knowledge not only fill the spirit but furnish it with pleasure and give stability to the soul, said Marilyn Arnold in the opening session of the Women's Conference Thursday in the Marriott Center.

Quoting Isaiah 33:6, Arnold, dean of graduate studies, said, "Wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times..."

Arnold said her mother has constantly been an inspiring example for her — instilling in her the desire to read and learn. "Don't go to bed until you have learned something new," is a proverb she remembers her mother quoting often.

Comparing herself to one of her favorite writers, Eudora Welty, Arnold said she fell in love with words. "Perhaps too seldom do we properly credit the power and the importance of the word," she said. Too often men destroy words and use their power improperly, Arnold said. Reading from the King James Version of 1 Corinthians and then comparing it with other translations, Arnold showed how the poetic quality of the verse had been destroyed by trying to simplify it.

Arnold cited the popular success books and so-called supermarket literature as examples of works which do not use the power of the word to its fullest potential. "Today's cure-all is tomorrow's Edsel," she said.

"As an antidote to all this printed noise we might remember that the word is so important that it is used in scripture to designate the Savior himself," Arnold said. "In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was God."

"In the non-scriptural reading we do, how much better surely to read the well-crafted words of intelligent beings."

S. African women unite, work together for reform

Julia Mavimbela told audience members that her country of South Africa is a country of many problems. A country struggling to know what is good for it.

Mavimbela was the speaker at the Women's Conference fireside Thursday evening at 7:30 in the Marriott Center.

She said that only when people come together can they understand one another.

"When we can liase as people above color something happens."

Mavimbela is involved in many women's organizations in South Africa that are attempting to change the bad things about South Africa. Women for Peace and the National Council of Women in South Africa are two of these organizations.

She said the organizations overlap, and build on one another. They are concerned about children, women, etc. Some other concerns they are working on are customary marriage, teacher's pay — which is unequal among colored and white teachers — and sanctions.

Concerning the pay for teachers Mavimbela said, "We went to the Minister of Education. We didn't stop. We made him very uncomfortable."

Mavimbela said women need to rise together and take their case to the leaders without challenging them with fists. "You need to make him remember that he has children too, and he has problems too." She went on to say, "If we can't reason with leaders, at times we lose what we should not be losing."

When asked what women in the United States could do to help the women of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in her country she replied, "by being pen pals, and sharing ourselves with them."

Child abuse trial begins for Moab man

MOAB — A 14-year-old Colorado boy, who admitted sexually abusing members of his family, testified he himself had been sexually abused by his step-grandfather.

The testimony came Wednesday in the trial of Moab businessman Jimmy Ray Richardson, 58, charged with second-degree felony sexual abuse of a child. Richardson is accused of sexually abusing the youth five times between May 1984 and June 1985.

The youth now lives in Larkspur, Colo., at a residential treatment facility for adolescents. He was placed in the treatment center, he testified, because "I sexually molested my brother and sister."

The disclosures were triggered one day about three years ago when he was caught by his stepmother attempting to perform a sexual act with his half-brother in his father's Salt Lake City home, he said.

Richardson was originally charged with four counts of sexual abuse of a child and five counts of sodomy, but the sodomy charges were dropped by the prosecution after a preliminary hearing last October because the alleged victim refused to talk about those incidents.

He said Richardson threatened to hurt him and whoever he told if it wasn't kept secret, and he was afraid because Richardson was older and had power over him. The boy said Richardson has since yelled at him, "I'm going to get you."

Palladium costs rise with fusion frenzy

SALT LAKE CITY — Announcement last month that University of Utah researchers had produced nuclear fusion has triggered worldwide efforts to confirm their findings and sent the price of palladium — a key metal used on the experiment — soaring.

For example, Thursday's edition of the British journal Nature lists numerous laboratories in the United States that are trying to duplicate the findings of U of U chemistry professor B. Stanley Pons and a British colleague, Martin Fleischmann of the University of Southampton.

Pons and Fleischmann announced March 23 they had achieved controlled nuclear fusion — the power source of the sun and the hydrogen bomb — in a simple table-top experiment conceived during a hike in the mountains and first tested in Pons' kitchen.

Palladium, tiny rods of which were used in the experiment, has been generating interest on the commodities market, where it had risen well above the $160 per troy ounce level by mid-week, up $1.50 in Wednesday's trading.

School, Church blamed for drug problem

SALT LAKE CITY — Public schools and Utah's predominant church, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, too often ignore the seriousness of teen-age drug abuse in the state, the father of a teen-age alcoholic has told a citizens' task force.

Both the father and his 16-year-old son testified before the Utah Citizens Council on Alcoholic Beverage Control on condition they not be identified.

At a Wednesday meeting of the council, the two stood together, telling how their "model family in a model community" was torn apart by the son's addiction while school and Church officials looked the other way.

"I'm $30,000 in debt and I have absolutely no idea how I'm going to pay that off," said the father, a former teacher in his 40s and now a businessman.

The son, who said he started abusing drugs at age 12 and turned to crime to support his habit, is undergoing costly rehabilitation.

"If he slips, I don't know what I'm going to do," the father said. "I don't have the resources to put him back in."

The father, identifying himself as a member of the high-priest quorum in his LDS stake, said his Church turned a deaf ear when he sought help.

Supertunnel would up economy, water

HEBER CITY — A proposed water supertunnel system connecting the Wasatch Front with its eastern slopes would boost the area's economy while providing needed water to the region's farmers and industry, a geologist says.

Leon Hansen, who has fought against the Jordanelle Dam under construction near here for many years because he believes the site to be unsafe, recently accepted an invitation by the Wasatch County Commission to present his views on the tunnel as an alternative to the dam.

Hansen says the Jordanelle Dam is being built on an active earthquake fault zone.

Under his proposal two parallel tunnels, to provide escape and ventilation, would be built in a nearly straight line from Draper to Park City. He guaranteed that additional water sources would be developed for Midway, rather than reducing its water supply.

He said the system would open up a "virtually unlimited" ground water supply.

Defense seeks acquittal in murder trial

FARMINGTON — A defense attorney Thursday urged jurors to acquit Thomas W. Randolph Jr. of a capital homicide charge in the death of his wife, Becky Rae.

Ogden Attorney Bernie Allen told the 2nd District Court jury that Mrs. Randolph committed suicide in November 1986 while suffering from depression and drug and alcohol abuse.

But members of the victim's family testified that at the time of her death, Mrs. Randolph planned to leave her husband and was not suicidal.

Randolph, 34, is charged with first-degree murder in the November 1986 shooting death of his 29-year-old wife.

In addition to the murder count, Randolph also is charged with making a false insurance claim, for which he collected more than $250,000.

Davis County Attorney Merrill Wilson said that insurance claim — along with testimony from Eric Tarantino, who claims Randolph once asked him to kill his wife while the two men were cellmates — would provide the foundation of the prosecution's case.

Daily Universe writers recently won five national awards from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, in news writing, news feature, in-depth stories, photo layout and special section.

A. Cory Maloy, a public relations major and Daily Universe news editor, won first place in news writing for his story "Officials Visit Yellowstone." Maloy said, "My reaction was one of surprise. I wasn't really expecting it but I'm glad it came to the Universe."

Maloy's story was about three Reagan Cabinet members who inspected Yellowstone National Park to check damage from fires last summer.

Alan Bailey, a public relations major and Daily Universe lifestyle editor, won a certificate of merit in news feature writing for "Museum Lacks Funds." The story was about the Earth Science Museum, which has a large collection of dinosaur bones but not enough money to display it.

This is the first year the Daily Universe has entered the Columbia Scholastic Press Association competition for college news publications. The association also awards the Pulitzer Prizes.

The awards were announced March 16, but the Daily Universe staff found out Thursday about their awards.

Editor Lane Williams said, "We're really proud of the Daily Universe and its staff and the five students who won. The student winners worked hard on their stories and are eminently deserving."

"We feel the Daily Universe is one of the best college papers in America and Columbia's honor seems to support us in that view," said Williams.

Handicapped taught to swim

MICHELLE CLAWSON
KENNETH S. ROGERSON

Some people never learn their swimming or lifesaving merit badges because they are afraid of the water. Other people can overcome this fear, but others have difficulties unless they have help.

The Adapted Aquatics program at BYU, a program begun by the American National Red Cross, is geared toward helping children with physical and mental impairments learn some of the basics of swimming.

In Roudadush, a recreational therapist at the American Fork High School, said they send students to the BYU program because of the bigger pool and the opportunity to have a one-on-one relationship with volunteers.

"Our pool is just not big enough," said. The training school pool is larger and designed more for relaxation and therapy purposes, but it is much to teach people to swim.

Michelle Laurie, 20, a sophomore at Caron, Saskatchewan, majoring in child education, is a volunteer at the Richards Building pool on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 11 a.m. who helps the children swim.

"I work with Brett on Tuesdays and on Thursdays," she said. "Joey is hydrocephalic and has to be helped physically."

"I first didn't see the progress," Laurie said. "But after you spend time with them and you earn their trust, they will do more and you will see them grow."

According to Laurie, there are many training programs, but a lot of the real training comes in working with the kids and the coaches who give suggestions on what to do.

"I do it because I love the kids and I want to make them feel like I'm needed," she said. It is really satisfying to be able to give those kids such individual attention.

According to Lani Henderson, a coach for Adapted Aquatics at BYU, the program serves both physically and learning disabled kids from schools in the Utah Valley area.

"Physically, the kids are just as strong as other children, it's just their minds that are weak," said Henderson.

"When they have something like swimming that they can excel in, they do just as well and sometimes better than other children." Some of the objectives of the program are to give the children an opportunity to experience success while having fun, to increase the attention span of the children and to provide skills that will help the children relate better to family and friends.

According to the instructions for volunteers, swimming is used because the children can experience success on their own level of learning, they can "do" and not just "know," it provides peer-group interaction and acceptance and it helps overcome fears.

According to the instructions, "Volunteers working in our swimming program must remember that regardless of methods, groupings or approach, one should always strive to meet individual needs while focusing on the ability, not the disability."

County officials upset over Tax Reform Act

JIM RAYBURN
Universe Staff Writer

Utah County officials are frustrated over Section 89 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 that requires the county to do testing to determine whether the benefits offered to county employees are subject to taxation.

John McGinn, director of personnel for Utah County, said Section 89 requires employers to notify all employees in writing of all benefit plans available to them.

He said Section 89 sets up several rules that compare benefits provided to "highly-compensated" employees with the benefits provided to "non-highly-compensated" employees, to determine if benefits are discriminatory.

McGinn said Section 89 requires county to conduct testing to determine whether the benefit plans offered to county employees are discriminatory. That is, it must be determined whether the employees on lower pay scales are receiving benefits that the employees on higher pay scales, he said. He said the county is found to be discriminating in its benefit plans, then the highly-compensated employees will be taxed on the "discriminatory excess" in their benefits. Benefits determined to be nondiscriminatory will continue to be tax-free, he said. A benefit plan must apply to at least 80 percent of the employees.

McGinn said Section 89 also states that employees who work more than 20 hours a week must be included in benefit plans. Currently most part-time county employees work 20 hours a week, he said. "We are going to have to change the way our part-time people are working," said McGinn. "In order to comply with the 80 percent test we will have to limit our part-time employees to 20 hours per week to about 15 hours per week."

McGinn said several consulting firms have approached the county about conducting the tests. One firm, Precision Planning, out of Salt Lake City, presented a proposal to the county commission to do the testing for about $9,500.

Commissioner Brent Morris said, "I just do not see where we are going to get the money. We are in the middle of a fiscal year and we just do not have money to allocate for something like this. I just cannot believe the federal government is requiring us to do something like this."

Morris asked McGinn whether the county could conduct the testing "in house."

"I just don't see how we can," said McGinn. "We do not have the expertise to do the testing, neither in the personnel office nor the county attorney's office." McGinn said it would be better to spend between $5,000 and $9,000 to conduct the testing than subject the county and its employees to possible taxation.

Commissioner Malcom Beck said he favors conducting a cheaper random-sample testing of the employees rather than the more expensive testing of all 494 county employees as proposed by Precision Planning.

University of Utah has yet to completely prove its findings.

"There is a trillionth of a difference in the University of Utah's findings and professor Jones'," said Richards.

"We are very realistic when we state that the project may not go commercial for years, decades or maybe never, whereas the (U of U) has made it sound like we'll be using the technology tomorrow, and has subsequently received much more attention," said Richards. BYU will take the necessary time to completely authenticate its findings and potential for commercialization, rather than "jump the gun for attention's sake," Richards said.

Marijuana grower faces fine, prison for intent to sell

By JIM RAYBURN
Universe Staff Writer

A man arrested in January for growing marijuana in a Pleasant Grove home was found guilty Wednesday on three third-degree felony counts and could face $15,000 in fines and up to 15 years in prison.

Fourth District Judge Cullen Y. Christensen found Robert Dean Phelps, 47, of Pleasant Grove, guilty of possession of an illegal substance with intent to sell, cultivation of marijuana and violation of the Drug Tax Stamp Law — all third degree felonies. Each count carries a maximum fine of $5,000 and a five-year prison sentence. Phelps was also charged with theft by deception, though that charge was dismissed.

John Allen, deputy prosecutor for the Utah County Attorney's Office, said another suspect in the case, Kent Nielsen, is still at large. He said a warrant has been issued for his arrest but so far national efforts to locate him have been unsuccessful.

Castro walks careful path

Cuba holds upper hand in alliance

By KENNETH S. ROGERSON
Senior Reporter

Cuban leader Fidel Castro has an advantage in the Soviet/Cuban relationship right now, said the chairman of BYU Latin American Studies.

Mark Grover, who spent some time in Cuba in the early 1980s, said the visit from Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev was to reinforce relationships that have already been there since the 1960s, but Castro knows that he has the "upper hand."

Castro walks a very careful path, he said. "He knows that he is important to the Russians and as US-USSR relations improve, he becomes less important," but he is still strong enough.

Gorbachev was in Cuba in order to sign a friendship treaty that will emphasize the unity that exists between the two communist countries, but that may be only a meaningless gesture.

According to Grover, it is superficial because it really accomplishes nothing, except the first visit of a Soviet leader to Cuba since the 1970s.

According to the Reuters News Service, Gorbachev's visit is meant to prove to the world that the friendship can still be nurtured despite "their choosing different roads to solve their economic and social problems." Despite a common background, their communistic philosophies are interpreted differently.

"I think there will always be relations between the two countries," said Grover. But, because of differences in opinion, the Soviets may give less money and assistance to Cuba and other Latin American nations.

Most of the those who oppose Castro have left and gone to Miami, said Grover. Mainly because the totalitarian suppression to free speech had left them unable to act.

In January 1989, The U.S. Department of State released a study on human rights in Cuba and said in spite of some improvements, and Cuban President Fidel Castro's claim that there are no problems with human rights, "the facts speak for themselves."

Some recent improvements include releasing some political prisoners and allowing them to emigrate, and granting permission to international human rights groups to observe facilities and situations in Cuba.

But, there are still problems, according to the Department of State report. "There have been credible reports of repressive measures directed against human rights activists."

Among the reasons for this restraining nature are the communists' complete control of the government, no criticism of the Communist Party or its leadership is allowed, the media are controlled by the state, there is no academic, artistic or religious freedom and a law of arbitrary arrest or detention for those who are "harmful to the decision of the Cuban people to build socialism and communism."

When he was in Cuba, Grover said he noticed the lack of freedom. "The only thing they can write about is revolution. It is basically a dictatorship that doesn't allow freedom of expression."

God warns not to fear, Professors talk on women in early ages Sister Holland says

By JOELLE M. ROBINSON
Universe Staff Writer

In a panel discussion addressing ways to increase faith and decrease fear, Patricia T. Holland said God repeatedly advises us in the scriptures not to fear because he knows life may be very frightening.

The discussion, part of the Thursday morning session of the Women's Conference, was moderated by Holland and featured four speakers.

Voicing their opinions on the subject were Jeanene Scott, wife of Richard G. Scott of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, author Emma Lou Thayne, Jae R. Ballif, BYU academic vice-president and Sheila S. Olsen, a renowned civic leader.

Scott said that in pioneer times many women were able to succeed because they followed the advice of the prophet. Today people often rationalize that the prophet's messages do not apply to them personally, she said.

As an example, she cited President Ezra Taft Benson's declaration that husbands should support their family and only in an emergency should wives seek outside employment.

"Many lives have been blessed from obeying President Benson's council," she said.

"I know that if we ... keep the commandments, pray for individual guidance and inspiration and obey the council of our living prophet, we can increase our faith and understanding and have courage to face life's challenges," Scott said.

Thayne said we are confronted with many fears, not the least of which is the fear of aging. "You don't learn, you just get older and you know," she said.

Every day is a new awakening and each one should be treated as a new opportunity to learn, she said.

"Education turns my leaves green, brings my blossoms out and allows me the full measure of my creation ... It takes life to really teach us," Thayne said.

Ballif said faithful Latter-day Saint women often find themselves in the dilemma of wondering how to raise a family and still develop their talents. This uncertainty causes them to enclose themselves within oppressive walls, he said. These walls are small barriers which restrict thought and lead to fear and frustration by people on both sides.

"Society desperately needs the talent and the contributions of women," Ballif said. The gospel teaches that we must develop our talents but it also teaches us that we are to have children, he said.

The greatest fears which women face are probably life, death, the known and the unknown, said Olsen.

Many women feel they are not fulfilling themselves if they do not reach beyond their traditional roles as wife and mother, she said. A formal education is not necessary to acquire wisdom, however, because the greatest lessons are learned from simply living life, she said.

Women's roles through time provide a mirror for Latter-day Saint women in a modern age.

Daniel Blickman a BYU professor of classics spoke about women in ancient Greece, and Catherine Corman of the BYU English department spoke about female lives during the English middle ages, during a Thursday session of the Women's Conference in 347 ELWC. Blickman used literature to illustrate what the Greek world was like from a woman's point of view. "The problem is that we hardly have any words preserved from the women themselves," he said.

Blickman said Greek literature identifies important mother-child relationships and outlines the significance women placed on love rather than war.

He said "radical" writers such as Plato and Euripides created

"unsettling scenes" for their audiences by making bold speculations about the role women should and could be playing in Greek political and social life.

Blickman said the type of history Euripides called for — history that does not neglect the woman's viewpoint — is finally being written today, 2,420 years later.

Corman identified two English women from the middle ages, and used their life stories to exemplify the fact that "we (in 1989) are not so very different (from women who lived a thousand years ago.)"

She said women of both times experienced a world with much turmoil and lived as part of a patriarchal society.

"Wisdom and knowledge did indeed provide stability in their times — perhaps the only stability," Blickman said.

Corman spoke of women from middle ages as "peace weavers." asked, "What did they weave? just cloth, but peace." "We helped cement peace in a ble time," she said.

Take control

Plan financial future, speaker says

By KATHY HARPER
Universe Staff Writer

The Lord must think money is important because it is so pervasive, everyone has to deal with it, said a speaker Thursday afternoon during the Women's Conference.

Carol Clark gave advice and outlined financial plans that everyone should follow.

"You need to be the president of your money," she said. Don't let credit cards, your children, the bank, bills or other financial obligations control your money.

Find out "what gets you to fork over your bucks." Then focus on what things make good sense, she said.

"Saving is the bottom line," she said. People need to realize that the money isn't always going to be there. Get started, make plans and set goals, she said. "You should never have your money in an account that doesn't pay interest," she said. People should think "how can I earn the most money with my money?"

She also said that financial affairs should be in order so that friends or family can take over if something should happen. "It's easier if you know things in advance."

Family members should know where bank accounts, wills, deeds, safety deposit boxes, bonds, stocks, certificates (birth, death, marriage) and various other financial and legal documents are located.

Paying attention to details in insurance policies, trust funds and bank accounts is also important, said Clark. Things like naming a beneficiary are sometimes forgotten.

Shop around, she said. Look for good options that fit your needs when opening accounts and applying for credit. "Never sign anything you don't understand and never sign anything with blanks," she said. Bring along a friend who can help and understand what is going on.

"The Lord has taught us that we can be wise stewards over all things," including our money, said Clark.

Diet and exercise increase; couch potatoes fatten up

By BECKY HALES
Universe Staff Writer

Although the diet and exercise trend in the United States seems to be on the increase, most peoples' health and fitness is not, according to a BYU associate professor of physical education.

Connie L. Blakemore said, at the Women's Conference Thursday, that exercise physiologists and physicians are concerned because a good portion of the population are becoming couch potatoes with fitness problems.

"According to a recent article in USA Today, 50 percent of the population are not fit even though more of them are exercising," Blakemore said.

Sixty-five million Americans are currently dieting, but they have only temporary weight loss results.

Blakemore said children, especially Utah's children, are becoming more and more susceptible to weight gain.

"We find that the Utah children are slightly fatter than the national average," she said.

Women on English faculty live reading at conference

MARGARET MCKIE
Universe Staff Writer

Three authors of poems, essays and books read from their works at a "Magazine Interlude," the Thursday evening session, of the BYU Women's Conference.

Clouise M. Bell, associate professor of English at BYU, read some of the essays which appear in a column, "When I Laugh." Bell's column, which she has been writing for 10 years, appears in Network, a Salt Lake City publication.

Bell read a humorous essay about the four seasons system some women use to decide what color clothes and make-up to wear. She suggested the system be broadened beyond spring, summer, fall and winter and said she would be a "Monday morning."

Bell also read an essay about zucchini recipes and one about hospital visits.

One woman attending the session said, "I haven't laughed that hard for a long time."

Bell won a first place award from the Utah Society of Professional Journalists for her column in 1980, in the category of columns, criticism and analysis. Last semester, she received the Karl G. Maeser Distinguished Teaching Award for her teaching in creative writing.

Susan Howe, a faculty member of the English Department, read some of her poems. She read poems in the areas of the body, personal struggles, the beauty of the world, other women and families.

She said her poetry is influenced by current events, and read poems about the fires at Yellowstone National Park, a television set being stolen from a rest home and a woman who attempted to climb Mount Everest. She also read a poem based on "a true incident at Hogle Zoo," which was the death of a female rhinoceros in a freak accident.

Howe is working on a book but said she doesn't have enough poems for a book yet. She said she is also working on a dissertation about "women's voice in literature." She has published a play called "Burdens of Earth."

Louise Plummer, a part-time faculty member of the English Department, read from her young adult novel "The Romantic Obsessions and Humiliations of Annie Schmeier."

The book is about a Dutch family who moved to Salt Lake City from Holland. The family includes the parents, a senile grandmother called Oma, a daughter named Hennie and another daughter, Annie, who is the narrator. Plummer read a humorous section of the book where the family has a fight during dinner because Oma, who eats Twinkies all day, won't eat dinner.

Plummer's book won honorable mention in the third Delacorte Press First Young Adult Novel Contest. Plummer has written a second book that is now being printed and will be released in about a year.

Depression level higher for LDS women

NICOLE WOOD
Universe Staff Writer

LDS women report a significantly higher level of depression than LDS men as a result of individual conflict or what the acceptable role for a LDS woman in society should be.

Fifty-two percent of LDS women in the U.S. are in the labor force," said Marie Cornwall, acting director of the Women's Research Institute at Thursday session of the BYU Women's Conference.

This statistic is equal to the overall amount of women in the labor force in the U.S.," she said.

Debbi Christensen, a resident psychologist at the Utah Valley Regional Medical Center said, "LDS women assume they face a choice between becoming a nurturer or a high achiever. This conflict is the cause of a great deal of frustration to the LDS women. LDS men don't have this conflict," she said.

More and more women are just trying to pull themselves back from being classified," said Christensen. "There is a growing number of LDS women who are saying 'I just want out' and don't side with either role."

However, Christensen said all LDS women questioned in her research stated motherhood as the single most important aspect of their life.

According to Martha Nibley Beck, a Ph.D. Candidate at Harvard University, "From a diversity of LDS women interviewed 34 percent said they relate very strongly with a female deity."

The women attending the BYU Women's Conference are not representative of the population of LDS women, said Cornwall.

LDS women are very diverse. "At any given time 30 percent of LDS women in the U.S. are not married," said Cornwall. She also said 19 percent of all LDS households in the United States have occupants who are married in the temple and have children in the home.

Acceptance is a major key to loving, happy marriage

KATHY HARPER
Universe Staff Writer

Myths and worldly expectations use a lot of couples to miss out on a full and rich experience that marriage offers, said a BYU professor in family sciences.

A Lynn Scoresby spoke during the Women's Conference on the way couples can build a foundation for a happier marriage.

One misconception is "marriage is a cure for loneliness." In fact, he said, people spend less time alone together after they are married than they did courtship.

"Marriage can satisfy our cultural expectations" is another falsity.

Scoresby said he once heard a friend say how nice it would be to be in her husband's arms all night. When she tried it, it wasn't very comfortable. Her arms fell asleep and she couldn't move around very well.

He said people bring ideas and expectations to marriage on how things ought to be.

When the other person doesn't own these "ought to's," problems occur. For example, he said, "If you want to kill a woman's passion, tell her that she should be (passionate)." Scoresby also explained how the man is in charge of emotions. Stress is an emotion that is linked to survival.

The brain will focus on survival. This can be alleviated by providing conditions inside and outside that are conducive to positive feelings, like love.

"The one single behavior that makes one human being attractive to another is acceptance," he said.

This basic concept is extremely important to the relationship. The more one is willing to accept and know, the more the other person is willing to reveal.

"You'll always love your spouse" is another myth. The emotional part of love comes and goes, he said. Again, he emphasized the need to become an accepting person. One needs to look beyond bits and pieces of behavior and look at the person, he said.

One can choose love or security. "If you pursue love, you have to take risks. It requires that we extend ourselves and try new things," he said.

Scoresby also said that spiritual things are important in marriage. People who have religion in their life on a regular basis stay married longer. He said to appreciate the moment. "These experiences and moments transcend what words can say," he said.

FITNESS

A national child fitness study revealed that approximately 10 percent of the children tested were above the 90 cholesterol level, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

"We really need to get a handle on weight in our youth because excess weight makes us age faster," said the Centers for Disease Control.

A Harvard study revealed that people who engaged in a moderate exercise program lived up to two years longer than those who didn't.

The study further showed that those who engaged in vigorous exercise did not have better results than those who engaged in moderate exercise.

Exercise can also help to eliminate stress and depression and to deter osteoporosis, Blakemore said.

A good exercise program balances spiritual and physical exercise with motivation and proper habits. Blakemore said people should exercise at least three to four times a week. They should sustain the proper exercise heart rate for their age range for at least 12 to 20 minutes.

Y spokesman objects to claim that research confirms U of U's find

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A Brigham Young University spokesman has objected to a University of Utah official's statement that BYU's nuclear fusion experiment was confirmation of the University of Utah's research.

"The fact is we haven't confirmed anything they have done," said BYU spokesman Paul Richards. "I guess that the fact that we have done something similar may mean something, but we have not been confirming their research."

James Brophy, University of Utah vice president for research, had said last weekend that the Hungarian researchers' announcement that they had achieved fusion by electrolysis constituted the second confirmation of the work by U of U chemist B. Stanley Pons and University of Southampton professor Martin Fleischmann.

He had said that the independent work by BYU physicist Steven Earl Jones was the first confirmation.

Both experiments used electrically charged metal rods submerged in heavy water. The charge draws deuterium nuclei into the metal where they can be pressed together enough to fuse, the scientists believe.

"My comment was that they detected fusion neutrons, therefore they have seen fusion in palladium," Brophy said Tuesday. "If he chooses not to call that confirmation, I think that is a semantic issue."

Jones' experiment produced very little energy, about one ten-trillionth of a watt, while Pons and Fleischmann reported an "astronomical" amount of energy — enough to melt the equipment.

Richards also expressed concern about the rumors that Jones stole information when he reviewed a Department of Energy grant proposal from Pons and Fleischmann last September.

"We continue to hear allegations that Steve pirated information," he said.

Richards would like to see the grant proposal made public. "I think the solution to that is to see what the U of U's proposal has. Steve didn't get anything from it."

"They have filed patents. We will file patents. If it comes to a determination of who had what first, that proposal has to become part of that determination," he said.

Brophy said he had nothing to do with such rumors, and he said the proposal will become public after the grant is awarded. The $322,000 grant is expected in May.

Women told of their roles in today's bureaucratic Church

By SHANNON STOWELL
Universe Staff Writer

Discussion of women's seemingly declining role in an increasingly bureaucratic Church organization brought spontaneous applause from women attending a Thursday Women's Conference lecture.

Marie Cornwall, of BYU's College of Family, Home and Social Sciences addressed the topic of a woman's place in complex organizations, and applications for Latter-day Saint women in the Church.

Speaking in 375 ELWC, Cornwall first addressed the question of how a woman's status has changed as society has changed from a subsistence to a market economy.

She said women of the past made clothes, candles, brooms and medicine.

But, as husbands began to make a cash profit, women could buy cloth rather than make their own, and women could hire domestic help to assist in the care and cleaning of a household, Cornwall said.

"Once women did not have to spin their own cloth and make their own cheese ... they ended up free to pursue their own voluntary effort to solve some of the problems of the world," Cornwall said.

Cornwall said today, this voluntary effort has been involuntarily taken away from women.

"By the turn of the century, organizations began to solve all of society's problems. (Women's voluntary organizations) were gradually taken over," she said.

Cornwall said the same type of thing has happened in the Church.

"Our Church has become what society calls institutionalized," she said. "Any church that grows as fast as the LDS Church, is going to have a lot of stress (from change)."

Consolidation of programs, for example, has resulted in more efficient organizations, Cornwall said, but it has also taken traditional women's responsibilities away from women.

"Women find themselves outside of the domain of organizational bodies. ... Without access to the decision making processes, (women may tend to feel) they have no real role or purpose," she said.

Cornwall said women can and must make a difference in the community and at Church.

"Do what needs to be done," she said. "The Church does need the input of its women. (It) is facing a period of growth (and as a result is faced with) many organizational problems."

During the discussion a distinction was made by an audience member between the Church as an organization, and the gospel teachings of the Church.

BYU opens against CSU today

The Cougars hope to improve record with long home stand

By KEVIN NIENDORF
Sports Editor

The BYU men's baseball team will open a two-day doubleheader beginning today against Colorado State University at 1 p.m. at the BYU field.

The Cougars will again face CSU Saturday at the same time and place. BYU is hoping to start a new winning streak against CSU as a result of its loss to the University of Utah on Tuesday. Colorado State is at the bottom of the WAC standings while BYU is sixth.

BYU is now 18-10 coming into today's action and hopes to improve that record with 12 of its next 16 games to be played at home. BYU has played just two of its first 28 games of the season at home so BYU Coach Gary Pullins is looking forward to the next few weeks in Provo.

Only Saturday's games will be broadcast over the radio in AM 1400 (KSTAR). After the CSU series,

THEY SAID IT

"I was anxious from the time I woke up. I knew he had the big streak going into the game...With all the talk, you'd think he was unhittable. He's just a pitcher with good stuff."

— said Cincinnati Reds player Todd Benzinger after knocking in a run in the first inning against Orel Herhiser, thus ending his regular season record of 59 consecutive shut out innings.

Duncan chosen for BYU's highest woman-athlete award

The BYU women's athletic department announced today that Dylann Duncan, a BYU All-American volleyball player, is the 1989 recipient of the Leona B. Holbrook Spirit of Sport Award. It is the most honored recognition given by BYU to a female athlete.

The award goes annually to a senior whose play and participation in life are expressions of human character values which represent the true spirit of sport.

Duncan, a 6-3 middle blocker from Salt Lake City, has received more distinguished honors and awards than any other female athlete ever to attend BYU.

In this season alone she was selected for the NCAA Today's Top Six Award, voted to the AVCA/Russell All-America First Team, chosen the HCAC Volleyball Player of the Year and earned the NCAA career record in kills for all divisions (2,188). She was a Reebok Player of the Year finalist and a Broderick Award nominee.

An electrical engineering major, Duncan has been voted GTE Academic All-American three times and BYU will face Southern Utah State College April 11th and 12th in afternoon games.

The Cougars have 11 lettermen, including four starters, returning from a 41-18-1 season and were ranked 22nd in the nation by Collegiate Baseball magazine during pre-season.

Heading the list of returnees are All-America Paul Cluff at second base and a trio of junior right-handed pitchers led by John DeSilva, whom ESPN analyst and former Cincinnati Red Joe Morgan claimed would "have a career in the major leagues as a relief pitcher."

Moving into the bullpen duties is sophomore right-hander Bart Grubbs, who can throw hard every day in short relief. There wasn't a lefthander in the pitching corps last year, but this year a pair of junior college southpaws should work in the starting rotation, Mike Switzer and Rob Jensen.

Others who make the pitching staff more solid than it has been in recent years are freshmen Eric Smith and Marc DiCarlo, with Dave Nash and Kelly Fredericksen as savvy veterans.

Catching the pitchers are three-year letterman Brad Eagar and senior Bruce Ellis. Eagar has been a starter much of his career and has been very consistent. Ellis is the starting right fielder, but is "a pro prospect because of his arm," at catcher according to Pullins.

DYLANN DUNCAN has been a Cougar Club and HCAC scholar-athlete for five years.

Last summer she competed with the USA "B" Volleyball Team and has been invited to try out with the USA National Team.

Soccercats to host two home matches

The BYU Soccer Team will host two exhibition matches this week against Ricks College Friday night and Saturday night against the University of Utah. Both matches are scheduled to kickoff at 7:30 on Haws Field.

"We've been in spring training for a couple of weeks now and have some very exciting players who will be rather entertaining to watch this weekend and next fall," said Coach Dave Woolley. Complimentary tickets to the Ricks College match on Friday night and the University of Utah match on Saturday evening can be reserved on campus this week at the Outdoor Soccer Ticket Booth near the south entrance to the Book Store.

Fans can also call the Soccer Office at 378-3334 to reserve complimentary tickets to both exhibition matches.

It's as easy as renting a Ryder truck, one way.

Compare costs before you make plans for moving at the end of the semester.

If you're 18 or older and have a valid driver's license, you can use a Ryder truck, rent-it-here, leave-it-there. Load up your stereo, 10-speed, clothes; everything. You'll still have room, no doubt, for one or two friends with their things to share the cost. Compare that to the price of a plane ticket. Or even a bus. Plus shipping.

Rent a newer truck from the best-maintained, most dependable fleet in the world - Ryder. The best truck money can rent.

Blue-White game to be played Saturday

There will be new dimensions to the annual Blue-White football game at the Marriott Center tomorrow, as the Cougar Club hosts the spring gridiron event and a pre-game football forum and picnic.

Last year we had nearly 10,000 show up for the game," said Cougar Club executive secretary J. McCann, "and more than half of those obtained a free lunch by purchasing their tickets in advance of the game.

"We decided to repeat that practice again this year," said McCann. In addition, the sponsors of the game are staging a motivational seminar - "Road to the Superbowl game" - in the Marriott Center at 10:30 a.m. the day of the game. Players like Tom Holmoe (San Francisco 49ers), Leon White (Cincinnati Bengals) and Vai Sikahema (Phoenix Cardinals) will describe in some detail their participation in the Superbowl.

McCann said that tickets for the April 8 (Saturday) game are now on sale at the Marriott Center.

Saturday's 1 p.m. kickoff will follow the usual Blue-White format; the team and coaching staff is divided into two units.

With senior quarterback Sean Covey recovering from knee surgery, the quarterback chores will fall to a pair of sophomore quarterbacks, Ty Detmer and Chris Hoge.

The Cougars' home schedule for next fall will begin Sept. 7 when BYU hosts Washington State. Other home games will feature Wyoming, UTEP, Oregon, Air Force and Utah. Away games include New Mexico, Navy, Utah State, Colorado St., Hawaii and San Diego State.

Tickets for the spring game are $4 for adults and $2.50 for students, children under 18 and senior citizens.

The Marriott Center ticket office will be open 9-5 daily for those purchasing tickets in advance, or call 363-BYU1 from Salt Lake City or 378-BYU1 in Utah Valley area.

Seating for the Blue-White game will be open rather than reserved, officials said.

The Blue-White game is sponsored by the Cougar Club and BYU Food Services.

Men's tennis team hopes to repeat win Weber Invitational

MICHELLE HALES
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's tennis team defeated the University of Idaho 7-2 Friday during the first round of the Weber State Invitational in Ogden, Utah.

Playing without their No. 1 player, Dave Harkness, BYU won all singles matches while winning one doubles match. BYU's number one and two doubles teams lost the number three team picking up the win.

Harkness, ranked 12th in the nation, has been out of action since March 28 when he experienced back problems during the Cougars' match against the University of California, Berkeley.

Coach Osborne said before going into the eight-team tournament that it would be more difficult to win it all year than last year. "It will be a tough tourney but we hope to repeat champions."

The win moved the men's overall record to 5-7. The Cougars will play today at 1 p.m. against the winners of the match between Weber State University and Boise State University.

Tracksters compete against USC Trojans

The University of Southern California gets a lot of attention, but this Friday it may get more than it bargained for if the BYU women's track and field team has anything to say about it.

We (BYU) are the lions and they (USC) are the Christians," said Coach Craig Poole, "The Christians will be the lions."

The men will also travel to Los Angeles for the USC meet, but they will be missing three of their best distance runners, who are competing in Austin at the Texas Relays; and two other tracksters might miss the meet because of injuries.

USC is one of those teams you always want to beat," said Poole.

Four years ago was the last time the Cougars battled the Trojans on the turf and the meet was not team record.

Store owner charged in porn search

By GARTH DESPAIN
Universe Staff Writer

The owner of an Orem video rental store was charged Wednesday on seven counts of violating state pornography laws, according to the Utah County Attorney's Office.

County Attorney Kay Bryson filed charges in 4th Circuit Court Wednesday morning against Mark Greer, owner of The Video Station, 240 E. 1300 South, Orem.

The charges were filed nearly two weeks after an Orem policeman saw two videos on the shelves of The Video Station he suspected contained pornographic material.

"One of our officers took one of the movies to 4th Circuit Court Judge Backland who viewed the tape and agreed to issue a search warrant for several other movies in the store," said Gerald Nielsen, a detective at the Orem Department of Public Safety.

Nielsen said Greer volunteered 42 different movies to the officers and execution of the warrant was not necessary.

"Orem police officers ended up taking 51 tapes from the store for review," Nielsen said.

Nielsen said four Orem detectives were assigned to view the tapes "in fast-forward mode, looking for certain instances of patently offensive sexual conduct that may violate Utah's pornography laws."

Bryson said one count of "distribution of pornographic material" was filed for each one of the seven movies police investigators determined may violate Utah pornography laws.

Under the Utah State Code which deals with pornography, it is unlawful to distribute any material deemed pornographic by state law.

The Code defines pornography as any material, taken as a whole and applying contemporary community standards, which, "appeals to a prurient interest in sex or sexual activities," or contains "patently offensive nudity, sexual conduct, sadomasochistic behavior, sexual perversion or excretion," Bryson said.

The third criteria for determining pornography is if the material, taken as a whole, shows a lack of serious literary, scientific, political or artistic value, Bryson said.

Penalties for the charge constitute a Class A misdemeanor and is punishable by a $25,000 fine and a year in jail.

The need for schools and businesses to work together is more crucial than ever, according to Provo School District superintendent James G. Bergera.

Getting business and education to work together to prepare students for careers was discussed by the Provo and Alpine school district superintendents at the Chamber of Commerce meeting Wednesday, said the chamber's president.

"The vital growth of the economic development of our area is directly connected to education," said Steve Densley, Provo and Orem Chamber of Commerce president.

"The ability of our education system to fill the future employment needs of business will be crucial," said Densley.

By the year 2000, 80 percent of all jobs will require some type of post-secondary education, said Steven C. Baugh, superintendent for the Alpine School District.

"Just preparing students for careers in business and in technology is an undertaking," said Baugh.

Technological advancement is difficult to keep up with because almost all technological knowledge has been developed during the last 80 years, and most of that technology has been developed in the last 20 years, said Baugh.

"It used to be reading and computing were only necessary for the professions, but soon most jobs will require educational skills," Baugh said.

Currently, 40 percent of all jobs are non-technical, but forecasts show only 20 percent of all jobs will remain that way, he said.

"Our knowledge base will need to be technical. We need to help young people learn how to learn. We need to teach them how to think, how to learn, and how to adjust," said Baugh.

Businesses need to become involved in education for their own self-interest and self-preservation, according to Bergera.

"The key part is, if you are concerned, to get involved in the schools," he said.

"All of us, when we realize how important education is to business, will want to get involved," said Densley. "We can pay for education now, or re-education in the future."

Student internships with the business community are vital for young people to be able to decide what type of career they want to pursue and how much education is necessary to be prepared for a particular career, said Bergera.

"They (young people) haven't had a lot of experience to help them decide what to do. ... We need advanced training, but we also need practical experience to go along with it," Bergera said.

The business community is constantly being asked to support education with their money, but money isn't enough, said Baugh.

"We are extremely grateful for what you (the business community) have done monetarily, but we are interested in other things like your service, your expertise, and your training beyond the dollars," Baugh said.
